President's report 2013-2014
Respectfully submitted by Jesús Ilundáin-Agurruza

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

The first order of business is to congratulate you all at the executive for the impressively efficient and effective work. I want to thank in particular those whose term ends this year, Lisa Edwards and Pam Sailors as members-at large, and Mike Austin as elections chair. Of course, I also extend my warmest welcome to incoming members Kenneth Aggerholm and Ana Zimmermann as Members-at-Large, Pam Sailors (who does not seem to get enough) as elections chair, Vegard Fusche Moe, who joins the HAFS committee, and especially John Gleaves, who has been doing a fantastic job for a year already. I am very grateful to all those who voted in the elections.

As the executive members' reports and the following highlights show, IAPS and the profession are doing very well. Most of the issues and suggestions raised last year were satisfactorily fulfilled. We are also lucky to have in our future wonderful opportunities to seize and challenges to meet.

The following highlights tasks undertaken by the executive, and outlines a number of issues for discussion and future implementation when needed.

1. Implemented Items and Policies

1. Conference Grants. Available for hosts are a $3000 USD grant to keep registration costs reasonable, and a $2000 USD grant for keynote speaker expenses
2. Student Travel funds. The amount was increased to $500 USD. Online donation amounted to $1750. Thank you to all those generous souls.
3. Revision of Constitution. Revised to reflect actual practice of Members-at-Large duties and HAFS committee membership (a fourth member added)
4. Reorganization and transference of some Conference Chair duties to the HAFS Committee: R Scott Kretchmar Award and Student Travel Grants

Note:

Human Kinetics has requested that IAPS members be reminded that our membership dues operate on a calendar year basis, i.e. January 1 2015 through to December 31 2015 is the upcoming membership period for 2014. Members will receive renewal notices beginning November 2014 for the 2015 membership year.

Student Travel Funds

The facilitation of online donation to the student travel award has generated a substantial number of donations totaling $1725 USD. At the Brazil meeting, there will be 8 student presenters who applied and qualified for the IAPS Student Travel Award. The IAPS Executive recognizes the value of student participation at annual meetings and more importantly the need to provide financial support for students. In March of 2014, the IAPS Executive approved increasing student travel awards to 500$/student (see March 2014 IAPS newsletter).

Conference Grants

In lieu of increased financial difficulty hosting IAPS conferences, the IAPS Executive approved the following conference grants. Host organizers are eligible for a $3000 USD conference grant to ensure conference registration fees remain feasible. A detailed budget is required. Additionally, conference organizers can receive $2000 USD for keynote speaker expenses so that it does not have to be offset by the registration fee. Keynote speakers will have the following financially covered: transportation to/from the airport, conference registration fee, and accommodations. Note: there has not been a standard practice in the past, and some keynotes had some expenses covered, while others did not. (see March 2014 Newsletter)

Journal of the Philosophy of Sport
Editor's Report, August 6, 2014

1. Submission Statistics

This report covers the twelve months from August 7, 2013 to August 6, 2014. Here are the basic statistics for this year and from the reports from the past few years:

	2013-2014	2012-2013	2011-2012	2010-2011	2009-2010
New Articles Submitted	59	60	68	52	57
Re-submitted Articles	11	24	10	Not reported	Not reported
Accepted Articles	30*	24	27	19	21
Book Reviews	7	4	4	6	4

(*Includes 15 invited articles for the 2014 and 2015 special sections)

New submissions have remained roughly constant (59 in the last year compared to 60 the previous year). The acceptance rate, not including papers invited for the special section on gender and sport (Jan 2014) and the special section on teamwork (Jan 2015) is 34% (or 15/44). This compares with an acceptance rate of 46% the previous year (again, omitting invited papers). Re-submissions are down this year (11 in 2014 versus 24 in 2013). In both cases the numbers are down due to a change in policy to insist on more stringent standards for accepting papers. As reported last year and discussed with the editorial board, the journal is becoming more demanding about what papers it will invite for re-submission. If reviewers return requests for "major revisions" or "reject and resubmit," I frequently reject these papers unless they show clear promise.

We have a backlog of 5 papers at this writing (down from 10 at the same time last year). A backlog of 5-7 papers is healthy in my view. It means that authors are not rushed to make revisions, and the editor need not feel pressure to accept papers that are not quite ready for publication. Until they are assigned to and published in a specific volume, backlogged articles are available on-line after they have gone through the copy-editing process.

2. Time in Review

According to Manuscript Central, average time in review over the past year has been just under 40 days, compared to 69 days the previous year. However, 40 days underestimates the time in review, since it includes invited papers for two special sections, which are often accepted within a couple of weeks of submission. This was particularly the case with the teamwork articles. These needed to be submitted on a tight schedule in light of the plan to have the author of the lead paper, Paul Gaffney, have an opportunity to respond to the discussants' responses to his lead essay. Having said this, my estimation is that time in review is down markedly from last year. Decisions are made on nearly all original submissions within 60 days, and in many cases less than 50 days.

Reviewers continue to average about 32 days to return their reviews and 36 days for resubmitted articles that are sent out again for review. This is outstanding, and I encourage IAPS members to extend their thanks and congratulations to editorial board members for their efficient work.

3. Transition to New Editor -- Paul Gaffney

I mentioned to the editorial board and executive council last year at the meeting in Riverside that I thought it was coming time for me to step down as editor. (I was then entering the final year of my fourth two-year term.) The executive asked me to put together a group of past editors to recommend a replacement. The advisory committee consisted of Nick Dixon, Scott Kretchmar, Bill Morgan, and myself. The group of us conferred by e-mail and by conference call and recommended Paul Gaffney as a replacement. This recommendation was accepted unanimously by the executive council. Paul, however, requires a year to wind up some of his current commitments, so I have agreed to serve for another year to permit Paul to take over in the fall of 2015 (subject, of course, to ratification by the membership). This process has been described to the membership in the election material that was circulated prior to the current annual meeting. We are all delighted that Paul has agreed to take on this job next year, and I look forward to working with him to facilitate a smooth transition over the coming year.

4. Third JPS Volume (Special Topic) and Related News

The JPS added a third volume this year, which will normally be devoted to a special topic. The publication schedule is now early in the year/mid-year/fall. The special topic volume is now planned for January or February and will be a stand-alone volume, unless there is room for other articles from a backlog. The page length of each volume will be increased to 160 pages (from 144) in 2015. The 2014 special section was devoted to essays on gender and sport and was edited by Angela Schneider. Many thanks to Angela and the contributors for their excellent work on a topic that deserves to be more prominent in sport philosophy. The 2015 special topic volume will be devoted to the topic of teamwork. Paul Gaffney has written a lead article. Essays discussing Paul's article have been invited and received from Jan Boxill, Drew Hyland, Scott Kretchmar, Joseph Lewandowski, Stephen Mumford, Emily Ryall, and Cesar Torres. Paul is currently in the process of writing a brief "response to critics." All these pieces will appear in the first 2015 volume.

There is a tentative plan to have the 2016 special topic volume address philosophical issues connected to fans and spectatorship in sport. This will be discussed by the editorial board in Natal.

5. Changes to the Editorial Board

Alun Hardman was nominated by the editor to serve on the editorial board. This nomination was approved unanimously by the executive committee. Alun has done an excellent job as guest reviewer for the JPS in previous years, and we are very pleased to add his expertise to the board.

6. Translation Project

I have been trying to get this off the ground now for about 3 years. My job this year was to begin to find translators for articles from a list of leading articles that were selected by past editors of the JPS, the current editor of Sport, Ethics and Philosophy, and myself. I had enlisted Jesus Ilundain's assistance, but neither of us has had time this year to advance this project further. We will try again next year.

7. Thanks!

Finally, thanks to editorial board members for their continuing excellent work, and especially to Cesar Torres for managing the associate and book review editor responsibilities with much efficiency and aplomb. I look forward to working with all of you again in the coming year.

2014 Elections Chair Report
Submitted by Mike Austin

I am unable to attend this year, due to funding, and regret to miss what I am sure will be an excellent conference in a wonderful setting! This is the third year we've used an online tool for the elections. Participation has consistently been much better than the previous method. This year we had 106 respondents, compared to 114 in 2013 and 74 in 2012, which was the first year using the online survey.

Here are the results:

Newsletter Report, IAPS

S. Stoll, August, 2014

1. Three newsletters went to press from October 2013 to July, 2014.
2. In general, all officers made their deadlines for the newsletter.
3. The system seems to be quite functional with newsletter being printed on the web site.
3. I have no immediate changes to recommend.
4. However, it is possible that we could use the newsletter as a pedagogical curriculum site (this could also be a website feature), whereby individuals who are successful in their classes share a method or idea that has proven successful. Perhaps someone uses a case study approach, or some novel on line approach, or a discussion format approach. This could be very beneficial to the membership. We form a committee of three to review these submissions and develop a basic format like:
 - A. Brief Abstract
 - B. The Teaching Problem or Highlight
 - C. Explanation of what is needed to enhance learning.
 - D. A brief description of how the pedagogy is applied.
 - E. An example.
 - D. A conclusion of how the instructor believes it functions.
 - E. Any references that might support the pedagogy.

Website Administrator's Report 2013-14

The website continues to get on average 1500 hits per month and 50 hits per day. I would judge this to be high for a website for this type of association and believe that we should make much more of it than we currently do. Although calls for papers, related conferences and other news are posted, it is often dependent on the website administrator being sent the information. I would therefore urge all members of the association to consider forwarding on any news so that it can be added to the news page of the website.

We also have a 'resources' page which has some content but again there is more than can be done with this. It would be good if we are able to add some more content here. I would also like to include a list of latest articles on the 'Journal' page as it will provide newcomers with an indication of the types of article published. Any more ideas as to how we can improve and continue to refresh the content would be appreciated.

Conference Chair's Report Submitted by John Gleaves

I. Interim Chair

As interim conference chair, please allow me a chance to thank the organization for the opportunity to fill in for the former conference chair, Jesus Illundain, who was constitutionally obligated to step down following his election as IAPS president. Jesus left the position in fantastic shape and I hope that as custodian I have managed to maintain the office in as good of shape as I found it. He has proven a wealth of knowledge and a constant guide as I learn the tasks of conference chair.

II. A Historic Moment

This year's conference marks a significant achievement in IAPS's history. For the first time the organization has ventured to the Southern Hemisphere and we owe a debt of gratitude to our hosts Alberto Reppold and Jim Parry for their efforts to provide the organization a chance to connect with not only the geography but also the culture and intellectual climate of Brazil.

III. Call for Papers and Abstract Submission

The first call for papers went out October 21, 2014 to our listserv as well as several other listserves such as Idrotts Forum and the IOC Olympic Studies Center list of conferences. This date was later than is currently called for by the IAPS constitution but many found the call for papers still came too early. I request that the question about when the call for papers should be announced should be considered.

This year was also the first time that IAPS used a special email address for abstract submissions: iaps2014natal@gmail.com. I believe it yielded satisfactory results but is not optimal. The new email address had kept all of the abstracts in one place and could be accessed by people other than the conference chair, an ideal scenario should the conference chair be incapacitated. However, it also received a lot of spam while a few papers were caught by the spam filter. It also meant that unless the email address was frequently checked, abstract submissions or questions that went to the email address went unacknowledged for long periods of time. The first abstract arrived on December 22, 2013 and thereafter a slow trickle until March 30, 2014. Perhaps a better idea might involve email forwarding to solve this issue. I request that ideas for improving the abstract submission/notification process be considered.

The conference program and schedule and book of abstracts was released on August 10 to those participating in the conference and made available online.

IV. The 2014 Conference

The conference received 76 Abstracts. 2 Abstracts were withdrawn because the authors were invited to be keynotes for the conference. 51 were accepted, 17 were provisionally accepted with revisions, and 5 were rejected. The total number of presentations (including keynotes) is 45 (this does not count the parallel AFLiD Conference). These numbers indicate the 42nd IAPS conference was a smaller conference than previous years but of equal quality. The acceptance rate was consistent with previous years but submissions were down (from 127 submission in 2013). We also had more participants than usual with accepted papers later withdraw from the conference (23 withdrawals). An informal survey of the reasons for withdrawing often included presenter's lacking funding for travel. That said, we had 18 countries represented, which is consistent with past years and indicates the continued internationalization of IAPS. The countries were:

Brazil
 Canada
 China
 Czech Republic
 Denmark
 England
 Finland
 Germany
 Israel
 Japan
 Norway
 Poland
 Portugal
 Slovenia
 South Korea
 Spain
 United States
 Wales

I request that we consider efforts to encourage hosts from various geographical regions to organize future IAPS conferences to help grow IAPS as an international organization while also consider balancing the ambulatory nature of the conferences with regions that are close to many perennial members (North America and Europe).

V. Student Travel and R. Scott Kretchmar Award

Please note that the student travel stipends and the R. Scott Kretchmar awards have historically been addressed by the conference chair but have now been handed over to the chair of the Honors, Awards, and Future Sites committee.
